Dynamic kidney scan (renogram)

Who is this leaflet for?

Your doctor would like you to have a nuclear medicine kidney scan and has arranged for you to visit our department. This leaflet aims to answer any questions you may have, but please don't hesitate to contact us if you need any more information.

What is a dynamic kidney scan?

Also known as a renogram, this is a sensitive test that shows how well your kidneys are working. It provides information about the blood flow to your kidneys and how well each kidney is producing urine. It also shows if there are any obstructions to your urine flow. A small amount of radioactivity is used to obtain pictures of your kidneys and bladder and these will help your doctor to understand your illness.

Are there any alternatives?

You could have an IVU or CT scan. These provide information about the structure of your kidneys but less information about how your kidneys are working. You may need these tests as well as a renogram.

How do I prepare for it?

Please have three glasses of water about an hour before your appointment time. You may go to the toilet as normal. This will improve the quality of the pictures. Eat normally and keep taking your prescribed medication.

What will happen?

Depending on the reasons for doing the scan, we may need to administer an injection that makes the kidneys work a little harder. This would normally be around 15 minutes before the actual scan. For the scan, you will be asked to lie on the camera couch where a small amount of radioactive tracer is then injected. It is very unlikely that you will have any side effects from this injection.

How is the scan performed?

You will be asked to lie still on a bed for about 30 minutes, while the radiographer takes pictures. The camera will be positioned underneath you, but you will not usually have to remove any clothing. After this, you may be asked to empty your bladder in front of the camera while sitting on a commode (for women) or standing (for men). This only takes a few minutes and is not needed for all patients.

Is it suitable for everyone?

If there is a chance that you may be pregnant or are breast-feeding, please contact us before your appointment date. If you are a woman of childbearing age, we will ask you to confirm that you are not pregnant. If there is any doubt we will have to rebook your test, unless the test is urgent.

If you have any special requirements regarding manual handling, or if you suffer from urinary incontinence, please inform us before you attend your appointment so that we can make suitable arrangements to help you.

Are there any risks?

We ensure that the amount of radiation you receive is as small as possible. It is similar to the natural radiation you would receive from living in Cornwall for 1 month. Radioactivity is eliminated from your body very quickly and allergic reactions are very rare.

Do I need to take any precautions?

No.

Can I bring someone with me?

Yes, but please do not bring pregnant women or children unless they are the patient.

When will I get my results?

We are unable to give you the results of your scan on the day you attend. We will send a report to the doctor who asked us to do the scan as soon as possible. If a hospital consultant arranged your scan, a follow up appointment will be arranged for you.

Where can I park?

Parking is in the pay and display car parks. There are 'dropping off' points and parking for the disabled near the main entrances.

There is also a park and ride service at Langarth (West Truro) and Tregurra (East Truro) which operates a frequent bus service to the Hospital.
